

Got to Go to Göttingen

This past Spring, the Game Authors meeting was held in Göttingen, a university town in northern central Germany. (Göttingen is about a 3 hour drive southwest of Berlin.)

The Göttingen Game Authors meeting is where designers present their products to companies and playtest each others' games. Here are a few photos from the recent meeting taken by Bruce Whitehill, (unless otherwise noted). AGPC
