»JEGRO« LEG-PUZZLE

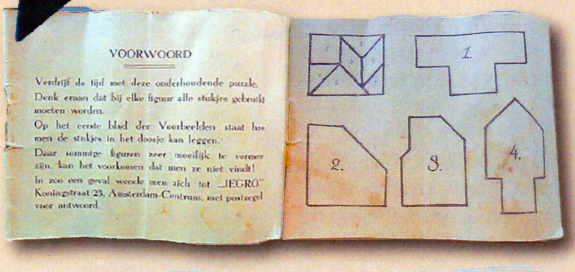

Article by Fred Horn

Some 50 years ago, when my interest in Tangram puzzles was growing (with a colleague of mine) I developed a series of 7-piece Tangrams. I acquired this strange 7-piece puzzle while walking around the open market on "Koninginnedag" (Queen's Day—when her birthday was celebrated) in Amsterdam. Spotting this puzzle, and parting with few dimes later, I took the small box home but couldn't find then any more information about it!

But now we have internet at our disposal and all of these searching possibilities, so I attempted again to look for any information. My only 'hit' was my own puzzle (this one) which now resides in the Spellenab in Bruges, Belgium.

There is no K-number (the paper-distribution number used until 1947) but in the accompanying booklet the old spelling (which changed in 1947) is used. So I think the puzzle is from that year: 1947. Because it differs from the original 7-piece Tangram it is a nice puzzle, but who developed it and produced it for the Dutch market remains a mystery! AGPI

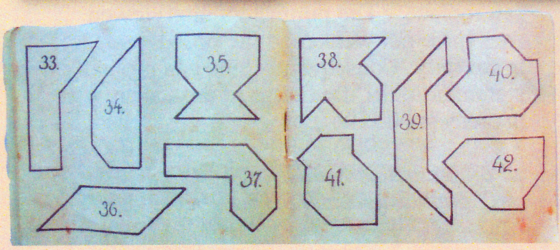

FOREWORD

Pass the time with this amusing puzzle. Remember that all the pieces must be used for every figure.

On the first page of the Examples it states how to store the pieces in the box.

Since some of the figures are very difficult to form, it may occur that one cannot find them! In such a case please contact JEGRO, Koningsstraat 25, Amsterdam Centre, with a stamp for a reply.

Rule booklet with Tangram examples to solve.